Solidarity Asks End to Strikes, Food Marches

By Karol Cwinarowicz

GDANSK, Poland — Solidarity mion leaders appealed Wednes-day for an end to strikes and marches over food shortages and urged workers to sacrifice free Sat-urdays to boost output.

A statement by the union's na-tional leadership, meeting here, called on Poles "to abstain from hunger marches and strikes called to improve the supply in view of the serious economic and social situation in the country."

There have been several strikes and demonstrations throughout the country in the last few weeks. One of them brought Poland's in-dustrial heartland in Silesia to a halt for four hours on Friday.

The union leadership also ap-pealed for all miners and industrial workers to work eight free Samrdays to boost production and con-tribute their bonuses to those in urgent need. A Solidarity spokesman said that the plan was voluntary and that workers could choose which Saturdays they wanted to WORK

Not a Concession

He said this was not a concession to the government, which granted all workers Saturdays off following strikes earlier this year; but simply an attempt to improve the economic situation.

The union also said it would call printers out on strike for two days. next week, closing the country's newspapers, unless the government stopped what Solidarity called an official propaganda campaign against in Solidarity leader Lech Walesa said at a press conference that the union found itself at a crossroads, faced with the choice of setting as a union or giving priority to civic re-spensibilities. He said the leadership believed the union should tackie the problems "as citizens rather than unionists," indicating it would con-centrate for the time being on improving the food supply rather than workers' rights.

Solidarity earlier Wednesday rejected government charges that it was trying to turn itself into a political force and take over the country. It also replied to charges contained in a resolution of the Communist Party Central Com-mittee, which ended a meeting cariy Wednesday

The resolution said: "New tensions, particularly street demon-strations by Solidarity extremists, are against the party program and threaten efforts to overcome the present crisis."

Authorities Blamed

The Solidarity statement said the anthorities were to blame for the situation, because the government represented the same politi-cal forces that had been in power for decades.

The union denied it was acting outside the terms of its statutes or that it was trying to turn itself into a political party. It said it could oot limit the political views or ac-tions of its members.

However, the Solidarity leadership called on the organizers of a march on Warsaw planned for next week to postpone it. The march was called to protest against the detention of political prisoners. The government has warned the organizers that it is prepared to use all means at its disposal to stop the march from taking place.

In the Silesian region, local un-ion officials said they were main-taining a strike alert to protest plans to punish unionists who locked up coal mine managers dur-ing last friday's four-hour strike in the region.

In Warsaw, party leader Stan-islaw Kania met the Polish Roman Cathchic primate Archbishon Jozef Glemp, at Mr. Kania's re-quest. The PAP news agency said they discussed threats to national independence and agreed that the (Continued on Page 2, Col. 5)

Canadian Controllers Call Off Air Boycott

Long Delays Remain in Europe, U.S.

From Agency Dispatches WASHINGTON — Transatlan-tic air travel showed signs of re-turning to normal Wednesday after Canadian air traffic controllers went back to work, but long delays still confronted thousands stranded in Europe and the United States by two days of chaos stemming from the Canadians' sympathy action supporting the U.S. air controllers' strike.

Officials on both sides of the Atlantic said they expected the situa-non to improve with controllers in Canada working normally for the first time since Monday.

The Canadians had refused to handle flights to and from U.S. airspace on the grounds that the U.S. strike had made the skies over the United States unsafe. A shutdown at Gander, Newfoundland, meant that flights between the United States and Europe had to be rerouted farther south or canceled. Flights between Canada and Europe and traffic over the polar route from Japan also were halted. Gander, which handles the bulk of flights across the North Atlantic, normally processes 200 flights in each direction daily. Canadian cootrollers agreed early Wednesday to resume opera-tions after the Canadian govern-ment said it would establish factfinding teams to study air safety between Canada and the United States. The teams will operate 16 bours a day during peak bours to check on the safety of cross-border traffic, which was also sharply curtailed Monday and Tuesday.

Improving Gradually*

More than half of scheduled flights to the United States from Europe and Japan were canceled Wednesday morniog. But a spokesman for the Civil Aviation afternoon. Authority in Britain, which controls the airspace for U.S.-Europe-an flights, said: "The situation is

The spokesman said that, unlike on Tuesday, when there was only one route open for a maximum of four transatlantic flights an bour, there were five routes operating Wednesday with a capacity for 10 flights an bour on each, although the full flow was oot possible because of limited U.S. air control.

Pan American World Airways said two of its nine scheduled flights departed, in addition to four holdovers from Tuesday. Four U.S. flights from Rome were trollers lifted a ban on clearing flights to the United States after canceled but two left for New York, about ooe and a half hours late. there have been signs of an in-creasing public impanence with the paucity and low quality of consumer goods, which are worse here than in many Soviet bloc countries. Visitors are struck by the lines for meat and other products at state food stores, and by the lengths to which ordinary Russians pending and bureaucratic immogo to obtain almost anything Western, however modest.

The official press bas given in-creasing space to articles about the shortcomings of consumer prod-ucts. The Kremlin's sensitivity to the economic implications of its arms programs has surfaced in a number of speeches and articles devoted to Mr. Reagan's military policy. Viktor V. Grishin, a member of the Politburo, acknowledged in a speecb to workers in Warsaw last month that military expenditures are putting an increasing burden on the Soviet economy.

At about the same time, Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov was writing in Pravda about the in-The United States, the EEC and Japan decide on a system crease in U.S. military spending, saying that some people in Wash-ington are already calculating how of consultations aimed at preventing trade issues from erupting into major disputes. many Soviet ecocomic programs (Continued on Page 2, Col. 6) tion to restrain their continued self-aggrandizement and our willingness to reciprocate their self-restraint.'

The speech gave an outline of what Mr. Haig called "the four pillars" of the administratioo's foreign policy.

The first, be said, is the restora-tion of U.S. economic and military strength; the second, the "reinvigo-ratioo" of U.S. alliances and friendships; the third, a commitment to peaceful change and progress in the developing world. "The fourth pillar." which be said, "must be at the center of our efforts to promote a more peaceful world," is U.S.-Soviet relations based on "greater Soviet restraint and greater Soviet reciprocity."

'Global Catastrophe'

Mr. Haig demonstrated in-creased U.S. flexibility toward the Russians with some remarks missing from earlier speeches. For in-stance, he said, "Our unreconciled differences on buman rights must not be permitted to bring a global castastrophe.

"We must compete with the Soviet Union to protect freedom," he said, "but we must also search for said, "but we must also search for cooperation to protect mankind." He said that efforts at coopera-tion in the past, most recently dur-ing the "decade-long search for de-tente," were "hoth difficult and disappointing." He contended that the Russians took advantage of the period to expand their military forces and to step up their inter-forces and to step up their intervention abroad.

However, he said the Soviet ef-forts to alter the balance of power produced "a backlash." Mr. Haig said that Soviet intervention in Afphanistan and Soviet backing for Vietnamese subjugation of Cam-bodia has carned Moscow "the en-mity and fear" of many oo-naligned states.

'Outmoded Model'

"This backlash comes at a time when Soviet prospects are chang-ing for the worse," he said. "The economies of Moscow's Eastern European allies are in various stages of decline. The Soviet economy itself may have lost its capacity for the high growth it enjoyed in the past. Ambitious foreign and de-fense policies are therefore becoming more of a burden. Perhaps, most seriously, as events in Poland have demonstrated, the Soviet ideology and ecocomic model are widely regarded as outmoded."

S. Africa Raids Squatters' Camp

Visiting U.S. Lawmakers Assail 'Degradation'

By Jack Foisie

Los Angeles Times Service CAPE TOWN - A U.S. congressional delegation, in South Africa to assess "the directioo and pace" of government-promised relaxatioo of discriminatory laws against the country's black majority, were unintentional witnesses to the results of a police raid on a camp of 400 black squatters, mostly women and children.

At dawn Tuesday, after one of the coldest nights of the Southern Hemisphere's winter, armed police with dogs moved into a squatter area known as Nyanga and tore down all the temporary shelters, made of plastic supported by scrap wood, erected by occupants over the weekend

The congressional delegation, beaded by Democratic Rep. Howard E. Wolpe of Michigan, arrived a few bours later to find the home-less standing silent and dejected oo the sand dunes oear the South Atlantic shore. Police had set up roadblocks to stop volunteer social workers from entering the camp with food, blankets and medicine. The congressmen were also turned away.

"They are being left exposed to the elements, their only alternative to be sent back to their [tribal] homelands where they are likely to starve to death. I can't understand a government which would allow such a situation, let alone perpetuate it

Almost in tears, another New York Democrat, Rep. Shirley Chisholm, exclaimed: "I have oever seen such buman degradation, despair and disillusionment. These poor black mothers and children."

Periodic Conflict

Behind the scene at Nyanga is a history of periodic conflict be-tween squatters and authorities in the sandy flatland west of Cape Town. Under their determined policy of total segregation of all races, the government has made the western cape a "preserve" for those of mixed race. While also subject to discrimination, they are given job priority over blacks. With relatively few exceptions.

blacks who do find work in the cape must live without their families. The wives and children often become squatters, joining their men illicitly. For a long time the government usually chose to ig-oore the presence of these growing squatter camps. However, when ooe known as "Crossroads" had grow into a town of 30,000 people three years ago, bulldozers were used to obliterate some of the satellite camps around Crossroads. The illegal settlers were sent back to their tribal

Stung by the foreign reaction to such action, and by the remorse of many South African whites over what some consider a "heartless solution." Prime Minister Pieter W. Botha's Cabinet decided to allow Crossroads to remain, temporarily. The minister dealing with the problem, Pieter J.G. Koornhof, announced that a new, proper Crossroads would be built. The plan has progressed slowly and, so far, only about 2,000 people have been resettled.

Meanwhile, new squatter camps have sprung up, the one at Nyanga being right oext to Crossroads. Last month, in a move to send the illegal women and children home, About 200 people are being brought to trial. Legal efforts by volunteers, including several prom-inent Cape Town lawyers, have slowed the deportation process, with a case now before a higher court in which it is contended that sending the people back to their tribal areas will lead to their death by starvation.

An official of the government department dealing with black affairs said the policy now is not to tolerate the building of new shacks ocar Crossroads; this precipitated Tuesday's raid at Nyanga.

Such events, said Rep. Wolpe, sbows that apartheid "is a hurtful and inhuman system which strips individuals of their fundamental rights and buman dignity."

Debate on Raids Urged

CAPE TOWN (Reuters) -South African opposition legisla-tor Helen Suzman has called for an emergency debate in the House of Assembly over government de-struction of black squatters' shel-ters. Meanwhile, Mr. Koornhof said the squatters were given more than two years' notice of the gov-ernment's intentioo to tebuild at Nyanga.

Pilot sources monitoring the system said Tuesday that there have been four confirmed near collisions over the United States since the strike began. But, while that sounds terrifying to the average airline passenger, it is a lower fig-ure than usual and not one that concerns pilots.

"As long as the FAA is willing to restrict traffic, there's no problem," a knowledgeable pilot said. "But if they start to cave in to demands for more system access and begin to push the capacity, then safety could be in trouble." The FAA has been reducing flights by as much as 50 percent in some areas and has been maintaining a systemwide average of about 75 percent of the commercial airline schedule. Private planes and business jets are being denied clearances in some cases and encouraged not to fly; preference is going to the scheduled airliners.

The question of how frequently near collisions occur bedevils the FAA in the best of times. Asked for statistics Tuesday, the FAA said that in the first five days of the strike it received nine unconfirmed reports of near collisions DUGWAY PROVING GROUND, Utah - The U.S. Army's second shrouded airlift of $88 aging Weteye nerve gas bombs from Colorado in Utah began Wednesday with the safe arrival of 128 of the weapons at Dugway Proving Ground. The bombs are to be moved by truck in Tooele Army Depot, 25 miles (40 kilometers) east of Dugway, for permanent storage.

Army spokesmen said two C-141 cargo jets flew the weapons from # Rocky Mountain Arsenal near Denver to the western Utah military base, about 65 miles southwest of Salt Lake City. The Army says the base holds the largest stockpile of chemical munitions in the non-Community world.

U.S. Studying Plans To Replace Nuclear Shells Held by NATO

By Walter Pincus. Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON - Some officials within the Reagan administration have proposed that the United States keep the 20-year-old, eight-inch nuclear artillery shells Dema deployed in Europe, even with last week's decision to produce neatron rounds. Informed sources said that deal-mg with the older shells is a sensitive isue. The ultimate handling of the issue, a top. NATO diplomati said Tuesday, could create mi-much of a diplomatic controversy, as the neutron question. In 1978, President Jimmy Carter decided to replace the going shells. with a low-radiation nuclear projectile that could be converted into a neutron weapon if necessary. The Carter administration, however, did not approve the materials build the neutron component, or "enhanced radiation elements." The Reagan administration Thursday made the decision to assemble the entire weapon rather than leave it in two stages. President Resgan apparently feels no pressure to decide on the question of the old nuclear artiflery shells, sources said, because it may be a year or more before production of neutron shells reaches a point at which even the U.S. domestic arsenel has been replaced.

There are about 1,000 aging, high-yield, short-range atomic shells in the hands of U.S. units in several NATO countries, including West Germany, Italy, The Nether-lands and Beigium, according to Pentagon sources. The projectiles would be fired by U.S. and other NATO forces from howitzers that also can handle conventional shells.

Neutron weapons include cightinch artillery shells and Lance mis-sile warheads. While the warheads are added to the five-year-old Lance force, the shells were designed as replacements, with old ones scheduled to be brought back to the United States and disassembled; as is done with all retired U.S. nuclear weapons.

BRE Among ideas now being dis-caused in the administration for handling the old shells, sources said Tuesday, are: • Leaving the shells in place in Europe, even after the entire neutron force has been produced, as a bargaining point in arms control talks

· Announcing that old shells will be withdrawn from Europe during the next few years as their replacements are stockpiled in the United States in hopes of casing objections to the decision to produce neutron weapons. • Taking the shells out of Eu-

'Linguistic Camouflage'

At the same time, however, the U.S. delegation is under firm instructions not to specify U.S. objections, so as not to pre-empt the administration's position - a tac-tic that has further stretched the patience of other delegations and was angrily denounced by Mr. Inam as "inguistic camouflage."

Despite the public chill, U.S. negotiators are still confident that they can review the treaty on their own terms and timetable, and the first test of this appears to have been a meeting Wednesday. Ac-cording to the U.S. camp, it was the first of 10 meetings planned between the United States and a group of 21 influential delegations - a body that was set up within the conference some years ago and is now headed by Tommy T.B. ## U.S. Asks Industry's Help To Foil Computer Spying

By Walter Sullivan New York Thines Service NEW YORK - The National Security Agency has formed a new center to work with businesses in evaluating methods devised by scientists to prevent unauthorized access to computer systems.

Its first goal is to allay industry fears that industry's inventions would be stamped secret, thus preventing their marketing except un-der government approval. The Se-curity Technical Evaluation Center is apparently designed to encour-age businesses to share their developments with the government in return for protection of their marketing rights.

Without that cooperation, ac-cording to Adm. Bobby R. Inman, deputy director of the CIA, concealment of ingenious new advances could lead to a situation in which hanks and insurance companies have better protected comput-er systems than the government.

Study of Jogging Pigs Now Shows

Exercise Benefits Heart Patients

Los Angeles Times Service

SAN DIEGO - Just three years ago, scientisis at the University of California, San Diego, surprised and exasperated exercise advo-cates when they reported that jogging does not necessarily prevent heart attack by boosting collateral circulation.

Now, they have changed their minds. Based on experiments with a group of jogging pigs, the re-searchers said jogging may, indeed, ward off or reduce the severity of a heart attack. But there is a catch: To benefit from the exercise, a person should already have heart disease.

The trouble with the old experiment on which the "no benefit" finding was hased was that the pigs used in the study were healthy, according to Dr. Colin Bloor, University of California researcher and president of the American Heart Association's San Diego County chapter.

This time, Dr. Bloor said, the Yucatan miniswine who were set to jogging for hours on a motorized treadmill at the university's field laboratory had artificial obstructions in their systems.

Rings Around Arteries

Rings had been surgically implanted around their arteries to simulate a condition called ischemia — diminished oxygen flow to the heart resulting from arterial obstruction.

During the course of the study, Dr. Bloor said, the pigs' collat-eral blood vessels increased by as much as half a millimeter in width and became 5 to 10 times normal size, thus hoosting blood flow hy 400 to 600 percent.

That improvement in collateral circulation, he said, saved about 42 percent of the heart tissue jeopardized by the clogged arteries in the little pigs.

By contrast, only 17 percent of the endangered tissue survived in a control group of pigs that were allowed to follow their natural inclination, lolling about and never being forced to jog.

Sourced Growth

Through some still-unidentified biological mechanism, the study indicated, artificial obstructions spurred growth of the collateral vessels in both jogging and conjogging pigs. But the jogging pigs' collateral system showed far greater development.

Researcher Frank White admitted that the new finding might seem a somewhat questionable health bargain. After all, he said "you almost have to be sick before you can get well."

And a heart disease victim may, obviously, be too ill to undertake the necessary exercise regimen. Two of the experimental pies jogged themselves to death.

On the other hand, Mr. White said, the results of the study seem to be an excellent argument in favor of lifelong exercise.

Maneuvers at Sea

Now that some of the shock has worn off from the Reagan administration's abrupt announcement that passage of a sea-law treaty was not a fait accompli - this year, next year, or perbaps ever - it is time to consider the U.S. objections. James Malone, assistant secretary of state, raised some of them a few days ago at the UN Law of the Sea Conference in Geneva. The U.S. concerns are focused on the part of the draft that deals with deep-seahed mining for nodules containg nickel, manganese, cohalt and copper. Mr. Malone's statement reflected those concerns as well as U.S. unhappiness with some decision-making procedures outlined in the draft.

On the mining question, Washington seems to bave two basic objections. The first is that economic returns to the United States would be greater without the treaty than with it. The second is that the agreement would commit the United States to share its most advanced technology with a collectively owned international mining organization.

Those two points are not in dispute. The question is whether the United States, baving accepted the treaty's fundamental principle that seabed resources are "the common beritage of mankind," is right in demanding that it provide the maximum possible commercial advantage; and whether the rest of the treaty provides trade-offs in other areas ranging from freedom of passage to fishing regulations and exclusive economic zones, that warrant a trade-off from the United States in this area. The answer is certainly not clear cut.

The main difficulty on decision-making has to do with the composition of the 36-member executive, called the Council, which will be the most powerful institution set up under the treaty. The problem is simple. The United States is not guaranteed membership on the Council and the Soviet Union, for practi-cal purposes, is. It is difficult to imagine circumstances in which the United States would fail to obtain a Council seat, but it is theoretically possible. According to some confer-ence observers, the Third World nations are adamant on this matter, because if the United States were granted a permanent seat, it would be the only country with a guaranteed veto on those key matters that are decided by consensus. As for the Soviet seat, the diplomatic nicety that other Socialist countries might fill the three places reserved for the East bloc seems to have satisfied Third-World countries.

There are other problems involving guarantees for companies that have already staked out mining areas, participation of nongovernmental groups ranging from the EEC to the PLO, maritime boundaries and rule-drafting. But if anything is to scuttle the treaty. it will be the main U.S. objections, which do not seem frivolous. What is uncertain, though, in part because the United States bas still not completed its review of the massive draft, is how firm the Reagan administration's commitment is to the "common heritage" principle, on which much of the treaty hinges. If that commitment is genuine, there is still some room for maneuver. INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE.

Bot there was much activity in Berlin, where what was to become the infamous wall was being built. More than 50,000 East German troops had been mobilized to huild the wall while the Soviet and Czechoslovak armies were placed on a state of alert. And the wall went up: 164 kilometers of concrete (41 kilometers between the two Berlins and 123 between West Berlin and East Germany); a oo-man's-land from 30 to 50 meters wide; a

West German newspapers headlined "Ostberlin Abgerni-gelt" — East Berlin Is Closed Tight — and a sign went up on the western side of the wall: "Liberty Ends Here." At the same time, a huge banner was erected on the eastern side of the wall, proclaiming: "The Frontier of Victory." All the slogans were right. Vote With Feet

From a very particular point of view, it was indeed a victory for the East. The wall was the last hink in a 1,345-kilometer long border, from the Baltic to Czechoslovakia, the best guard-ed border in the world. Technology was king and the East Germans boasted of an ultimate gadget, a system that sets off automatic machine-gun fire at the slightest touch of the barbed wire. And the guns are aimed automatically so that anyone within a radius of 20 meters is hit in the head, chest and the stomach. The last victim to date is Marietta Dorkowski, who was killed Nov. 22, 1980. She was the 72d fatality in 20 years.

An Official View: The Neutron Bomb

Quarreling Over Money

Even the Treasury Department seems to be getting uneasy about the very tight restraint on the money supply, and the continued very high interest rates. Specialists outside the government have been murmuring for some weeks that the present monetary squeeze is pushing the United States from a mild dip toward a severe recession. Now, of all people, Secretary of the Treasury Donald T. Regan says the same thing. In an interview published Friday in The New York Times, he called on the Federal Reserve System to relax a little or, at least, not to let the money supply tighten any further.

As is customary, the interview was followed by a chorus of assurances from the Treasury Department that it represented no change in basic position. You will believe that only if you are the kind of fanatic monetarist who, in the face of vast evidence, believes that the Federal Reserve can control the money supply with absolute precision from week to week. Mr. Regan is no fanatic. There has been a feeling at the Federal Reserve for some months that it is being set up to inherit the blame for any serious malfunction of the Reagan administration's economic strategy. Mr. Regan's interview will do nothing to dispel that impression. The Treasury's previous comments on this interesting subject delivered quite a different signal to the Federal Reserve. Less than three weeks ago the undersecretary for monetary affairs, Beryl W. Sprinkel, told a congression-al committee that inflation will come down "only if we stay on the course of persistent slowing" in the growth of the money supply. Later in his testimony, he added, "Any success in achieving a more rapid slowing of the money growth would be welcome."

in April, and the Federal Reserve tightened up severely. M1B peaked and, since then, has fallen.

If you measure from April, the growth of the money supply as measured by M1B is negative, indicating a dire and destructive degree of restraint. But if you measure from the end of last year, when by convention the targets were set, M1B is only slightly under its target range. Presumably the Federal Reserve anticipates a renewal of business expansion in the fall, carrying M1B up to precisely the level that present policy prescribes.

This whole episode is turning into an example of the political error of allowing one statistic - in this case, a notoriously flaky one - to become the authoritative measure and symbol of a highly complex policy. There is widespread evidence that present monetary policy may be, in reality, more re-strictive than M1B indicates. But how to correct it?

Assessing the Neutron Bomb

Any significant relaxation, in the present atmosphere, risks sending interest rates even higher. That's a perverse reaction, but the money markets bave come to see relaxation as the precursor of higher inflation, and the fear of inflation sends the interest rates up. Mr. Sprinkel made that point forcefully in his recent testimony, and he's dead right.

This dilemma offers a premonition of the real dangers inherent in the Reagan economic plan. The plan's central flaw is its easy supposition that tight monetary policy can choke off inflation, while tax cuts expand business prosperity. It's a nice thought, but the world doesn't work that way.

Ending inflation is going to exact real costs in bankruptcies, poor profits and lost jobs. Rational policy has to recognize these costs, and move gradually to keep them within tolerable limits. The risk of damage is now rising.

Suppose, further, that the weapoo were designed to stop a massive invasioo hy enemy armor that might otherwise roll, in hlitzkreig fashion, across democratic Europe and the territory of our principal allies.

Suppose, finally, that in addi-oon to the weapon's ability to help blum an invasion of Europe and save thousands of innocent civilian lives, it was safer, had increased range and better security, and replaced older weapons on a less than one-for-one basis - so that the total outsber of weapons would actually decline.

Neutron weapons, which Presi-deni Reagan has decided to produce, have precisely these charac-teristics. Moreover, they have a crucial characteristic that is more important than anything else about them: they would reduce the likelihood that, even in a crisis, the Russians would be tempted to launch an attack on our European allies. They thus promise to add to the credibility of our deterrent; and because they do that, they ac-tually reduce the likelihood that ouclear weapons would ever be used in a European war.

It is ironie that much of the opposition to the neutron weapons is based on the belief that they are immoral — despite their role in deterring war while making the Western democracies safer for individual liberty and moral expres-sion. The explanation lies in the abundant misinformation about neutron weapons, some of it inno-cently hased on ignorance of the facts, but most of it deliberatelydisseminated hy a well-orchestrated propaganda campaign hased in Moscow. Thus the president's deci-sion to proceed with the production of oeutron weapons for stockpiling on U.S. territory was bound to be cootroversial, especially in Europe, which has been the center of a Soviet propaganda campaign that began in the last administration and that exploited both Euro-pean fear and an unfortunate im-pression of U.S. indecisiveness.

The president's decision to produce and stockpile neutron weap-ons on U.S. territory is intended to strike a prudent balance between European sensitivities, oo the ooe hand, and, on the other, the oeces-sity to make difficult decisions affecting U.S. forces oo their merits. This assault against the approxi-mately 400,000 Baha'is is not confined to individuals nor is it a mere outhurst of religious passion. It is a case of well-planned genocide. # Berlin Wall: 20 Years as a Symbol Of Division Between East and West

By Peter Millar

> Reserved BERLIN — In the predawn hours of Sunday, Ang. 13, 1961, soldiers and factory workers in paramilitary nuttorm, rolled barbed wire across the center of Berlin, and the Cold War entered a new phase. The Berlin Wall was born

> In Wall was born At its 20th anniversary, and with a chill descending on the detente of the 1970s, the wall is still a symbol of the division of Europe between East and West — a tangible example of the "Iron Curtain."

Acceptance of the wall has grown with the generation born since it was constructed. In its relevance to the lives of ordinary East Berline's today, the words of a woman early on Berline's first morning as a divided city have proved prophetic. She was asked what she would miss most.

11

She was asked what she would miss most. She replied: "Ravioli. I used to bring two tins home for a weekend treat."

The inability to buy the foodstuffs and consumer goods seen nightly on West Berlin television is the East Berliner's most common complaint about the wall. East Berlin women know opening hours and sale prices at department stores they can never visit.

The East German government regards the wall as a national frontier and "Westberlin," written as one word, as an anomalous foreign enclave, a base for infiltration and espionage.

In the East, the anniversary will be officially celebrated. Street-corner posters show a 1961 photograph of the Brandenburg Gate — once a German imperial symbol, guarded by paramilitary troops — inset on a picture of modern East German soldiers. It proclaims: "Aug. 13, 1961 — for our security." The wall has become West Berlin's biggest tourist attraction, inspiring souvenirs ranging from postcards of the wooden crosses commenorating shot-down escapers to Tshirts emblazoned with "Berlin — Checkpoint Charlie."

The wall is smaller than most tourists expect, most of it a little over 10 feet (three meters) high. But its slabs of white concrete facing West Berlin are the last hurdle for anyone attempting to cross unofficially from the East.

There are, in fact, two walls. The border zone between them is up to 200 yards wide, an area of ditches, anti-tank defenses, nail traps and watchtowers, but no evidence of mines or automatic guns such as those that exist on the border between East and West Germany.

There are about 260 dog runs in which large German shepherds are loosed. Once many of the dogs were on long leashes, but that turned out to be too convenient for some escapers, who used the leashes to throtde the animals.

The wall not only splits Berlin but weaves an eccentric circle of about 103 miles (165 kilometers) around West Berlin. From the air, it looks like a sandy irrigation channel bounded by an innocent fence.

The border follows old administrative districts created by Prussian bureaucrats rather than military engineers, and some remarkable anomalies have resulted.

After Aug. 13, 1961, inhabitants of Steinstücken, a small area in the southwest, officially part of the western sectors of Berlin but cut off by several hundred yards, found themselves isolated and had to go through border controls even to shop. Eventually barter and negotiation secured a narrow road and rail corridor, but the wall runs close on either side.

Nearby, a similar East German salient protrudes into West Berlin, and the wall bulges to incorporate it. One pointed salient of the wall juts out from the east into the northern, French sector of the city, cutting off a former main road in order to surround one street. It is known to Berliners as "the duck'a beak" because of its shape.

Papers at Windows

But most bizarre is a part of the western edge of West Berlin, where, at one point, the wall has doors with doorbells. Two tiny strips of land on the western bank of the Havel River contain 33 garden plots and weekend cottages owned by West Berlin families. They are part of West Berlin, but cut off by 30 yards of East Germany.

To get to one of the riverside retreats, the owner has to ring a doorbell, wait for the automatic opening of the door and walk under surveillance to the property. Fishing and swimming in the river are not allowed. The Havel is East German and so are the fish. The quirks of Berlin's division are not only

The quirks of Berlin's division are not only their papers, displaying them through closed car windows.

Although the East German government geographical. The Western allies — France, Britain and the United States — do not recognize East Berlin as the capital of East Germany. To them it is the Soviet zone of occupied Berlin.

Modern East German buildings, at right, face older buildings of West Berlin just yards away across the Berlin Wall.

When allied officials cross to East Berlin by car, they regard East German guards as Soviet stand-ins and refuse to let them touch defends the wall as a bulwark of Socialism against capitalist penetration, it is also aware of its propaganda value to the West.

Last year, the wall was rebuilt in uniform style at Bernauerstrasse, where for 19 years housefronts, razed to one-story level, had been the wall itself. Many Western photographers had made telling use of a wire-meshed window in the wall, occasionally with curtains still fluttering.

More than 70 East Germans are known to have died trying to cross the wall. But it has succeeded in protecting East Germany from much of the social damage of a drain of peo-

In the West, even the graffiti on the white concrete is milder, less polemical and more whimsical than in the East. "Made in the USSR" and "Death Alley" have faded beside fresh-painted quips, such as — in a reference to East German party leader Erich Honecker — "Turn the light out, Mr. Honecker, you're the last to leave."

And to Western ears there is irony in that this summer's hit record in East Berlin is a song by the English rock group Pink Floyd, whose chorus is: "All in all you're just another brick in the wall."

After the Decimation: Ugandan Province Sustains a Fight Against Famine

By Iain Guest

TOKORA. Uganda — Every day, small groups of Karamojong tribesmen slip into this tiny community in northeastern Uganda, seeking treatment at the hospital. All are carefully screened for swollen bellies or loss of body fluids — the first telltale mean of mannution and famine.

A year ago, the makeshift hospital at Tokora, was a scene of devastation, its floor slippery and recking of sickness, its compound dotted with tiny infants left to die by their exhausted parents. The scene was repeated throughout the sparsely populated Karamoja province: Karamojong people, famed throughout East Africa for their belligerence, waited listlessly by the roadside, or crowded into Roman Cathclic missions in the hope of finding food.

Last year's famine killed an estimated 30,000 people — one-tenth of Karamoja's total population. One year later, the survivors have regained their surength. They crowd around visitors, strutting and posing for photos, sporting T-shirts, or showing off sinewy limbs beneath the traditional Karamojong cloak.

Most aid officials in Uganda are now confident there will be no recurrence of last year's famine; but they also agree that Karamoja faces an uncertain future. Some kind of longterm development plan is essential if the Karamojong are to recover completely and avoid total dependency on food aid; but few are optimistic that any plans will bear fruit in the chaos and insecurity that is now gripping Uganda.

moja if famine strikes again, and also compromising the success of the scaled-down program after Aug. 31.

arter Ang. 31. The extension will be necessary because, as has so often happened in the past, the weather has been a bitter disappointment. In March and April the rains were so heavy that they washed away whole stretches of Karamoja's dirt roads. At the unging of aid officials, the Karamojong rushed to plant corn and sorghum, the traditional crops, over an impressive 64,000 acres (26,000 hectares).

Then came May — normally the wettest month of the year. Instead, the Karamojong looked up to cloudless skies and the first breaths of hot air that presage the dry season. The premature stalks of corn began to wither, and UN officials now estimate that as much as 40 percent of the crops in the central belt of the province may have been lost.

A Certain Delicacy

Tike other parts of Africa that support nomads, notably the Ogaden and Sahel, Karamoja is no stranger to patchy rains. One analysis of the years 1919 to 1958 found that the rains were excellent in only five years; in seven years there was a total crop failure.

But such calamities have been surmounted in the past because of a delicate relationship between man and the environment. Karamojong men are accustomed to traveling for moaths with their cattle, following the sparse rains and living off a mixture of cow's blood and milk. Women and children, meanwhile, stay at home tending small vegetable plots in the boma — the family settlement. This has provided an alternative source of food when drought struck the crops or disease attacked cattle. And the pattern persisted until the 1979 war that deposed Idi Amin, when the armory at Moroto, capital of the province, was looted and thousands of weapons and rounds of amminition stolen. Suddenly, cattle-raiding and sporadic skirmishing with spears turned into bloody battles as the tribesmen from around Moroto turned their new firepower on traditional enemies in the northern region of Dodoth. Dodoth was soon stripped of cattle, and its people bore the brunt of the famine when the rains failed. Security has, if anything, deteriorated since last year. Although aid officials are generally ignored by the cattle raiders, two were fired upon in recent weeks, and on Monday, a nun working at a Roman Catholie school was killed when bandits fired on her vehicle near Moroto.

vast herd. Despite reports that the cattle have been smuggled into Kenya, and even Somalia, most are believed to be still within Karamoja. Cattle barons have grown casual about flaunting their wealth — even calling on UN officals to vaccinate their stolen animals against disease.

All agree that in this climate, to reintroduce cattle into the most seriously affected areas would be to invite trouble. But there are radically different views about what the response should be. Some aid officals are inclined to accept the cattle thefts as a fait accompli. "Tragic but inversible" is how the situation appears to Gilbert Greenall, who heads the program of Oxfam, the British rehef agency.

Diplomats in Kampala, too, hold out little hope that the government of President Milton Obote will reassert control in Karamoja at a time when Uganda is beset by political violence. One diplomat said that there was little political pressure on Mr. Obote to move against the cattle raiders and little sympathy for Karamoja in other parts of Uganda, some of which have themselves been raided. The province is represented by just four legislators in the 128-member Parliament. It has no naural resources of value, and hule food.

Mr. Greenall believes the only answer is to encourage people to move to, and farm, the fertile western crescent of Karamoja, which has relatively predictable rainfall and is underpopulated because the tsetse fly brings disease to cattle. One such settlement has already attracted 2,500 people. At the same time, Oxfam is pushing ahead with small agricultural projects — beckeeping and goat rearing — which may escape the deprodations of the raiders.

also heads the aid program of the UN Development Program. The second link in the chain is the World

The second link in the chain is the World Food Program, which procures the food and transports it as far as Soroti, west of Karamoja. The final responsibility, for actually handing out the food, rests with three voluntary reses — Oxfam, the Red Cross, and a French organization, Action Internationale Contre la Faim. Mrs. Wells freely admits that this machinery was burriedly put together during last year's was buriedly put together during last year's emergency. After a rocky first few months, during which food arrived irregularly and trucks broke down, it is now credited with the distribution of between 2,500 and 3,000 tons of food a month — and above all with the visible absence of malnutrition.

"Amazingly enough, the system works," said Mrs. Wells. "There's just no comparison with last year."

- At a time when the United Nations is desperately socking an effective response to disasters and emergencies, particularly in Africa, this machinery has at times appeared to offer something of a model in that it combines the expertise of several specialized agencies and is directed at a specific area.

'Trucking Agency'

Despite this, many relief workers in Karamoja feel the program has been crippled by the lack of any overall coordination. Officials of Unicef are particularly concerned that it has turned into what one called "a glorified trucking agency" — a far cry from its mandate for child welfare. Some feel Unicef should either have volunteered to lead the whole Karamoja operation, as it did in Cambodia, or stay out altogether.

Although Unicef is prepared to help in another emergency, it plans to turn over maintenance of its trucks to the Ugandan Central Transport Union and concentrate on improving nutrition and water supplies throughout Uganda. This has become more urgent with outbreaks of typhoid and cholera in Kampala. The three voluntary agencies distributing food face what is perhaps the keenest dilemma of all — whether to give out free food to the Karamojong or use it as wages to promote small-scale village development. The Red Cross, with no mandate for development, sees the task as primarily one of food distribution; but Oxfam, with a tradition of assisting agriculture, prefers to give out the food in return for work on roads, bridges and bosh clearmet, which it hopes will ease the transition from pastoral life to agriculture and reduce the dependency on food from outside.

Critics argue that a Western work ethic has no place in Karamoja, and that food-for-work projects simply give the government an excuse for not addressing the overriding problem of security.

The overall result is an absence of any central direction, and a mood of dissatisfaction among the relief workers that belies their achievements and seems certain to hinder the search for more funds if, as some predict. Karamoja remains dependent on international largesse for several years to come.

As a result, most of the energies of a large and costly international aid effort are still being directed at providing emergency food. But this, too, is an upbill battle. Although the costs of getting food into Karanoja are currently running at $350,000 a month — making it one of the most expensive operations of its kind — a series of meetings with donors has raised only $2.8 million from just four governments, forcing the United Nations agencies involved in the aid program to draw heavily from their own budgets.

Partly as a result — and partly because of the improving food situation — most agencies are planning to scale down their operations after the end of this month. This will cut the food handouts to around 700 tons a month (compared to the current level of 2,000 tons) and make it necessary for the Ugandan government to assume more responsibility for running the fleets of food trucks and providing jurd.

Although the agencies' options have been irastically curtailed by the lack of funds, some ear this is expecting too much of the ramhackle Ugandan administration, which is hard-pressed even to pay for its regular oil imborts (S4 million a week) or guarantee security in the capital, Kampala. In addition, some beieve the agencies will be undermining their capacity to mount another relief effort in Kara-

Cattle Barons

Throughout Karamoja, the raiding has created a climate of petty crime and lawlessness, in which food stores are looted and even corn stolen from the fields.

Meanwhile, Karamoja's food balance has been so drastically altered that aid officials regularly fly over huge stretches without spotting a single head of cattle, and then pass over a

Cattle Rustling

Other foreign relief workers, however, believe that the security of Karamoja must be improved before such long-term development plans can be considered. This attitude stems partly from an unwillingness to see one of Africa's last pastoralist cultures destroyed, and partly from a realization of the magnitude of the task of resettling thousands of seminomads. Similar schemes — notably in Somalia, where nomads from the Ogaden are being converted to fishermen — have met with only partial success.

"Karamoja's environment will never support full-scale agriculture," said one official in Kampala. "The only long-term answer is for the province to take food from other, more fertile areas of Uganda. In the meantime, the cattle raiding has simply got to be controlled, and the stolen cattle redistributed." However vital for the future of Karamoja —

However vital for the future of Karamoja and indirectly for other nomadic peoples this debate has taken second place behind the more immediate task of ensuring the smooth distribution of emergency food rations. The program is coordinated in Kampala by Melissa Wells, a former U.S. diplomat who now serves as UN Secretary-General Kint Waldheim's special representative in Uganda and

'Tristan' Tops Offerings At the Bayreuth Festival

BATREUTH. West Germany — The new production of "Tris-tan und Isolde" that has been the principal novelty of this year's fes-tival has brought with it a trio of artists making their first appear-ances in the mother church of Wagnerians - Jean-Pierre Pon-nelle as stage director and designer, Daniel Barenboim as conductor, and the American soprano Johanna Mejer as Isolde.

Past encounters between Wagner's multilayered symbolism and Ponnelle's byperactive imagination have not always been happy ones, hut this "Tristan" glows with a vis-ual heauty that is a reminder that Ponnelle was first of all a designer, and remains a master at getting what be wants from material and what be wants from material also drips with sexual symbolism — phallic, ovoid, vaginal — but then so does "Tristan," and for the most part the action on its primary large testing along to the test while level stays close to the text while weaving its erotic fabric.

Trees as Leitmotiv

Each act is dominated by a tree, and trees can be used in both masculine and feminine ways. In the culine and feminine ways. In the first act the tree doubles as the prow of a recognizable ship, with Isolde's quarters both separated from and linked to the rest of the vessel by a scrim-curtain sail. In the second, a richly blossoming tree stands for the whole garden, transition has a series from which standing hy a spring from which the lovers drink, as they drank the love potion from a bowl on ship-board. The garden glows with René Kollo and Johanna Meier in Act I of "Tristan und Isolde" at Bayreuth.

U.S., EEC and Japan Aim to Avert Clashes

By Clyde H. Farnsworth

New York Times Service WASHINGTON - The United States, the Common Market and Japan have worked out a special arrangement to tackle: trade and investment issues before there and into major disputes, according to a high-ranking U.S. official. The official, who asked not to be identified, said: the accord was. reached at last month's Ottawa summit conference as part of ef-forts to maintain an open world-trading system. Because the arit is to be informal, it was not cited in the sammit communique. The first meeting would take place in September. Bilateral consultative arrange-ments already exist. U.S. officials meet regularly with counterparts from Brussels and at other times with those from Tokyo. But offi-cials from Washington, Brussels and Tokyo never an at the same table, except at gatherings where more commes are represented and discussion is more diffuse.

The new strangement is de-signed to avoid a repeat of the sim-ation that arose over trade in antos earlier this year. The United States and the EEC were both seeking a reduction in shipments of Japanese cars. Both were worried that if Japan reduced exports to the one, shipments would swell to the other.

Now, if there are to be new problems such as this on the horizon, there will be no surprises," said the administration official who helped negotiate the new arrangement

The participants will be U.S. Trade Representative Bill Brock; the EEC vice president for trade, Wilhelm Haferkamp, and a Japa-nese official who will either come from the Ministry of International Trade and Industry or the Foreign Ministry — a reflection of the in-teragency battle still under way in Tokyo over whether MITI or the Foreign Ministry has primacy in trade matters.

In addition to acting as a trouble-shooting body, the new con-sulting forum will work on the strong forum wir work on me preparations for a ministerial con-ference in the fall of 1982 of the signatory nations of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. The well also confirmed an earlier oil discovery, it said. The well, drilled to 9,300 feet, was tested at combined flow rates of 8,145 barrels of oil daily from two separate reservoirs. Conoco said the well's shallower reservoir was classed as a discovery and produced at a rate of 6,425 barrels daily. The two wells — about 1.2 kilometers (seven-tenths of a mile) apart — are 56 kilometers off the Dutch coast. Water depth is under 100 feet.

GM Plans Car Output With Suzuki

U.S. Maker to Buy

Stake Under Accord

From Agenicy Dispatch TOKYO - General Motors announced Wednesday a three-way transaction in which it will jointly produce minicars with the Japan's Suzuki Motor Co. GM Vice President James Waters Jr. told a press conference that GM is discussing with Suzuki and Isizn Motors, already 34.2-percent owned by GM, the production of a small car with an engine displace-ment of less than 61 cubic inches. But he declined to specify when, where, and under what brand name such a car might be produced.

Mr. Waters said the prospective minicar "might bear some sort of GM identification," but cautioned this would depend on future agree-ments with Suzuki.

The announcement raised questions about how the arrangement fit in with GM plans for its new S-car model, the smallest in its World Car series. The S-car is expected to debut in 1985 as a follow-up to the J-car compact an-nounced in May.

Earlier, the newspaper Nihon Keizai reported that Suzuki would design the bodies for the S-car. Isaza will build the models at its expanded plant in Hokkaido, the

After the news conference, a senior Suziki official in Nagoya suggested that GM had abandoned plans to produce the S-car, saying that his company instead will sup-ply those cars to GM for sale in the United States and elsewhere, according to a Kyodo news service dispatch reported by Associated Press-Dow Jones.

GM is reported to be facing difficulties in producing the S-car be-cause of high costs, though it has completed development of the model, AP-DJ said.

The Suznki executive indicated to reporters that the purpose of the transaction is to enable his compa-by to take over production of the S-car from GM. The purpose is to supply to GM (the small) passed ger cars we have been developing," Kyodo quoted him as saying, "We will supply (small passengers cars) to North America and Southeast Asia on GM's behalf."

Isuzu will provide technical expertise peeded to meet safety and emission standards required for sale of the minicar in the United States, officials of the three companies said at the news conference. cies.

U.S. Slowdown Poses Risks for Reagan Plan

By Kenneth H. Bacon AP-Daw Jones

WASHINGTON - The Reagan administration was counting on a business slowdown to help check inflation, but the slowdown now well under way may turn out to be so severe as to stand in the way of another ad-ministration goal, a balanced budget.

Administration officials are becoming increasingly worried about the budgetary and political costs of the current sluggishness, which is largely attributable to the high in-terest rates that Washington is using as its main weapon against inflation.

"There's a growing risk that weak econom-ic activity will generate revenue levels that fall below our forecasts," says Lawrence Kudlow, chief economist at the Office of Management and Budget. He fears that this setback could complicate the efforts to con-tain the budget deficit and aggravate Wall Street's doubts that the administration can balance the budget within four years.

Credit-market worries that the government will remain a heavy borrower are among the forces keeping interest rates high despite a sharp narrowing in inflation. And if big federal deficits keep interest rates high even in the face of recession-induced weak-ness in business borrowing the third advinness in business borrowing, the third administration goal of a strong economic recovery could be made more difficult to achieve.

President Reagan's Cabinet council on economic policy has "had candid discussions recently about the fact that the economic statistics in the third and maybe fourth quarter are likely to look fairly bad," a White House official says. That is likely to slow tax receipts in fiscal 1982, which begins Oct 1. As a result, this official says, "there's no question that we're going to have to go back to Congress for more budget cuts." But an ailing economy may stiffen congressional resistance to further reductions, he warns.

Forecasters differ on the outlook for the current quarter, but most expect a little further slippage. The "blue chip consensus" of forecasts by business economists, compiled by Eggert Economic Enterprises of Sedona, Ariz, expects a 0.7-percent drop in real third-quarter gross national product. Administration officials and most private economists believe interest rates will turn down soon and spark a business recovery in the fourth quarter. The personal tax-rate cuts, which begin Oct. 1, and higher defense spending will help the upswing, they say. The Reagan program assumes that tax-rate cuts, declining inflation and lower interest rates will spur rapid growth. The admin-istration sees real GNP expanding 2.6 per-cent this year, 3.4 percent next year and 5 percent in 1983.

Failure to meet these goals would be cost-ly to the budget-balancing struggle. A 1-per-

The dollar fell as low as 5.83 French francs before recovering on profit-taking to 5.9675 francs, a sharp fall from 6.1437 late Tuesday. It continued gaining in New York, where it ended at 6 francs.

Conversely, gold rose to $413.50 an ounce in London and Zurich, a gain of $9 from Tuesday's late London quote but slipped in later trading in New York to $403.75 an OUNCE.

"There was a tremendous selloff of the dollar on profit-taking and the recting that its upward move-ment of the past two days had been overdone," one dealer said. "The dollar is now back to a more realistic level than at the begining of the week."

centage-point lag in real GNP widens the deficit about $8 billion as receipts fall and unemployment swells federal outlays.

The biggest budget problem the administration faces now is the price of persistently high interest rates. Every percentage point by which interest rates exceed budget as-sumptions increases federal debt-carrying costs about $2.4 billion a year.

In its budget planning, the administration assumed that the rate on 91-day Treasury bills would average 12.55 percent during the second half. But rates averaged 14.9 percent in July and were 15.67 and 15.24 percent in the first true to the first the first two August sales.

Privately, some Cabinet oficials worry that Mr. Reagan faces serious political and economic risks with only limited room for es-cape if the economy does not perform as boped. White House aides stress that any retreat from the pledge to balance the budget by fiscal 1984 and to support a tight monetary policy would destroy the administra-tion's credibility, further upset the financial markets and rile the Republican right.

If economic growth fails to meet expectations, the only course is to cut the budget deeper than is already planned for future years. Reagan advisers say. Some see bitter fights, both within the administration and between the administration and Congress, over expensive programs such as defense and Social Security, as well as smaller items.

Textile exports have bornmed up 18.6 percent in the first six months from the year-carlier period, to $3.3 billion, after rising 28.3 percent in all of 1980. Analysis predict this year's exports will reach a record $7 billion, up 11.2 percent from last year...

Two factors account for the phenomenon. One is the recent weakacss of the yen. The other, more fundamental factor, is that the textile industry is accomplishing what the industrial mandarins have in mind for industry as a whole: a shift to luxury product/s.

High-Quality Focus

For example, instead of focusing on yarn, thread and low-quality fabrics as it used to do, Japan's textile industry is increasingly ex-porting high-quality woven fabric and even apparel. Where Japan is most competitive now, analysts say, is in high-quality, expensive synthetic fiber fabrics.

the current export success.

In the late 1970s, when the yen was stronger, the textile business was regarded by anany as an "in-dustry in the twilight." The strong usury in the ballight." The strong yen made Japan's exports more ex-pensive for foreigners and imports from South Korea and Taiwan cheaper for the Japanese. So Japan in 1979 became a net importer of iextiles for the kirst time.

No Devaluation

Of Franc: Delors

PARIS - Rumors of a realignment of the European Monetary System and a devaluation of the French franc are unfounded, French Finance Minister Jacques Delors said Wednesday.

He said a realignment would not be a solution to the speculation in favor of the ciollar, which has risen strongly against most currencies. Mr. Delors said the United to the holders of Petroling warrants attached to the 4,5%-1973/1988 Mafina b

Following the increase in capital, through incorporation of reserves, agreed upon at the extraordinary general meeting held on June 25, 1981, the exercise price of the warrants has to be adjusted in order to reflect the increase in the number of Petrofina shares.

As announced in the agenda of the above-mentioned meeting, the adjustment was made by applying the formula indicated in the Prospectus relating to the 4.5%-1973/1988 Malina bonds with warrants attached.

The application of this formula causes a reduction of the warrant exercice price which from July 1, 1981, is B.Fr. 8.521.

T'S a wealth of intelligence, knowll edge and insight that Edward Mendelson, W.H. Auden's inerary executor. brings to this study of the poet's early development. With his array of interpretive tools, he solves for the first time the ootorious obscurities of Auden's earliest work. The key to these difficult poems is that they have oo key. "As sooo as one stops looking for the key to a set of symbols," writes Mendelson, "and recognizes that the poems focus on the self-enclosing patterns that bar their way to a subject in the world outside, their natorious ob-scurity begins to vanish." And just in case this sounds like sleight of hand, Mendelson, who teaches English and comparative literature at Columbia University, cites a passage in Auden's journal in which the poet develops this idea himself.

With his exhaustive familiarity with Auden's bibliography, he takes us for a look at Auden's unusual theories of a look at Auden's unitsual theories of speech and writing, to a source that no one has bothered to examine be-fore — an essay oo writing that Au-den prepared in 1932 for a children's encyclopedia called "An Outline for Boys and Girls and Their Parents." In these unitsely passes Auden defined these unlikely pages, Auden defined the sense of isolation that his writing was intended to overcome, and he thus established the starting point from which he set out in his circuitous journey to maturity.

Or if it's connections that need to be made between Auden's work and the literary traditions in which he worked, Mendelson is ahly equipped for the task. Some of the most exciting passages in "Early Auden" attempt to define the links between literary Modernism and the tradition of Romanticism - a thesis that the author develops not just to keep his critical muscles in tone, but rather to explain, among other things, the inner. contradictions of Auden's early historical poems

Indeed, so detailed is Mendelson's text, so precise is his reading of Au-den's work and so complex are the ties he establishes between the work and the poet's psychology, politics and aesthetics, that I wish I'd had time to go through "Early Auden" with all the time in the world. Its highest rewards appear to depend on a firsthand familiarity with Auden's poems, essays and plays.

But the major problem that Men-delson appears to have faced was how to relate all the detail of his text to

CONVERSATIONS WITH KATHERINE ANNE PORTER

Little, Brown and Co., 34 Beacon St., Boston, Mass. 02106 .-

TN her finest stories, the late Kathe-ther's stern eye." Lopez writes to embroider a bit, to change the facts rine Anne Porter displayed a kind of fierce femininity that was distilled in precise, lyrical prose; her narrative gifts were those of ecooomy, clarity and a certain willful discipline. Her own life could hardly have been more at odds with those values. Full of missed connections, it was a sprawl-ing, improvised narrative - there were three marriages and divorces, four lovers and more than 50 changes of address, sometimes two or three a year — and it posed, in its disorder, a considerable challenge to prospective biographers, a challenge Enrique Hank Lopez's "Conversations with Katherine Anne Porter" only partly fulfills. One of the problems is that Lopez seems unsure of just what he wanted to achieve with this book. Based on a series of interviews with his friend Porter, it was intended, he writes in the preface, to serve as "the story of a life as its holder perceived it." But the story is not told from Porter's point of view: Lopez never hesitates to charac-terize her actions, and he is forever insinuating himself into the narrative. The result is sloppy scholarship de-livered in an overfamiliar tone of voice. When Porter declines to name her first husband, for instance, Lopez neither presses her for further information oor conducts any research of his own. "Perhaps that name will sur-face in an official biography," he writes. For all the time she spent talking with Lopez, Porter clearly did not make matters any easier. One day she told him, "My mother died less than six weeks after I was born, and it was my birth that caused her death." Io a subsequent interview, she maintained, "my mother died two years at a born, and my birth had no bearing on born, and my birth had no bearing on whatever." "Perhaps that was the prerogative of the Southern lady, the apple of the fa-fit the storyteller's mood or the hercr's fancy." If reinventing the facts of her # came easily, however, turning win she called her "usable past" into the nes was something else again. M talented procrastinator, Porter fered from an acute case of yings, block and, over the years, that the tion led to frustration, guilt are terness. She left husbands and hour because she said they did not able her enough privacy to write. She to friended artists and revolutioning and diplomats, only to regret that time spent socializing might have been better spent at her desk. And the complained that the necessity of care ing a living by teaching and loctured distracted her from the demands of fiction. Although a few stories such a "Noon Wine," "Old Mortality, and "Pale Horse, Pale Rider" were written io sudden flashes of inspiration, the were months, even years, spent at a single paragraph. She published at fiction at all from December, 1998, 47. June, 1960, and her one comm success, "Ship of Fools," finder complete. The yellowing pages of the manuscript and many unfinited at ers were packed in suitcast, hauled by Porter on her wander around the world. It was an adventurous life, at Hand even a romantic one: She was areas while demonstrating for Sicon and Vanzetti, she consorted with rough and rebels in revolutionary Menor dined with Goebbels and Goening pre-World War II Germany, and met Hemingway and Gertrude State in Paris. But it was a sadly resiless it as well — a life that is only sketched not examined, in this provisional in ography. One waits in vain for all in terpretation of Porter's character, for an illumination of her imaginative Sec 9 Still, Porter's own voice, ellipti Still. Porter's own voice, elliptical and strong, emerges from the book conveying by itself the honeliness of her art. "I have never thought it and fortune, but a part of my drift, life most important to the work I do." He wrote her nephew once. "Yet, there?" no one I would call for in the hour of my death, and that I think is the fill itst of whether you are would in the interfe test of whether you are really about of not."

But here and there, and particular in a late chapter on the distinction Auden made between history and His sory, or love and Love, and the mean ings they held for his belief in any capacity to teach. ## BRIDGE

A T one table on the diagramed around to South, who made a cue-bid of two spades. When this was dou-bled, he jumped to four spades, another cue-bid begging for a minor suit. If North had bid five diamonds, he would have won the match, but he elected to pass, leaving his pariner to struggle. The spade ace was led, a doubtful choice, and West shifted to the heart king. South led club winners whenever he could, and West ruffed twice and was overruffed. The defense eventually scored one more trump trick and a trick in each red suit for down one.

In the replay, East made a preemptive jump to three hearts on the first round, setting South a problem. He jumped to five no-trump, and North played six diamonds. This contract would have made on a good day. hut was defeated by the bad breaks.

NEW YORK --- The hideaway was in Nogales, Chile, a small, unpretentious fown where Patricio Rodrignez owned a farm with an all-weather tennis court. Every day, José-Lins Clerc, the visitor from Argentina, ran for an hour, played three or four hours of tennis and then relaxed at a nearby beach or went horseback riding.

"We stayed there, on and off, for more than three months this year." said Rodriguez, a former Chilean Davis Can player who is Clerc's business manager and adviser. "You want to know why Jose is playing so well now, this is the reason. He likes to go to Nogales because he feels it's very good for his game. The best thing for a tennis player is to relax the mind. He didn't have a good start this year, but all the work we did there prepared hint for the summer."

John McEncoe, Bjorn Borg and Jimmy Common still are the Big 3 in tennis. But the player who survived the first, humidity and clay-court agonies in Boston, Washington, Morth Conway, N.H., and Indianapo-lis this summer was Clerc, winner of the last 25 singles matches. The Association of Tennis Professionals has thin fifth in its worldwide computer rankings.

'LFeel Completely Different'

"I feel completely different from last year," said Clerc, who will celebrate his 23d birthday Sunday at home in Buenos Aires. "I have beaten Common McEnnoc, Lentil and [Guillenne] Vilas now. When I go on the court now, I have more confidence, and the other players go on the court now if have more continence, and the other players must give memory respect." There have been other surprising boys of summer in recent years — players who for one reason or another had some of their best moments on the U.S. circuit that follows Wimbledon. Manuel Orannes of Spain celebrated his finest hour at the 1976 U.S. Open when he won the singles championship. In 1977, Vilas strung together 57 consecutive clay-court victories and rode off on the shoulders of ecstatic supporters as the open champ. In 1978, another slow-court specialist, Eddie Dibbs, claimed the $300,000 first prize in the grand prix bonus pool after a successful summer. And McEnroe's first major title was the 1979 open. Even with McEnroe, Borg and some prominent Europeans missing from the U.S. circuit; Clerc's streak has been impressive. He beat fellow-Argentine Vilas, 7-5, 6-2, in the Washington final; Dibbs, Ivan Lendl and Vilas in North Conway; and Lendl again, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2, Sunday for a second consecutive U.S. clay-court crown.

Praise From Capt. Ashe

"On the clay, he's definitely a force, no question about it," said Arthur Ashe, the U.S. Davis Cup captain, whose team may have to face Argentina in the cup final later this year.

"He's very strong, well-coached and mechanically sound. On cement, grass and indoors, he can be had. His serve is not that strong and he's not that good a volleyer. But he's a quietly passionate player who doesn't scream and yell and who plays with a high-intensity level. You can't see in, but it's there."

José-Luis Clerc in action against Jimmy Connors in Paris. .. If you have good concentration, it doesn't matter."

Anyone who has seen the triumphant Clerc on television or in newspaper photos in recent weeks has felt his passion. Clerc's arms were raised high, his head back, after the victory in New Hampshire. In Indianapolis Sunday, after hammering a service winner to Lendi's fading forehand at match point, Clerc clenched his fists tightly — and then drilled a ball out of the stadium.

For many years, Clerc's temperament inhibited his game. Clerc said that when he was a promising junior, "sometimes I was... oervous, nervous," His shaky performances in major championships under-scored that uncertainty. As the No. 12 seed in last year's open, he was upset in the first round hy Bernie Mitton of South Africa.

"In big tournaments," he said Sunday, before the clay-court final, there are so many pressures. I didn't play so well in the U.S. Open because I lose my concentration in front of so many people. It's a different tournament for concentration to be good - the airplanes every few minutes, playing at night.

'If you have good concentration, it doesn't matter. But if you don't have good concentration, you lose for sure."

Rodriguez has known Clerc for seven years and has provided the same psychological support that Ion Tiniac gives to Vilas. "The way he was acting on the court, it was two different persons," Rodriguez says oow. "Off the court, Jose was full of life and humor. But on the court be was tense. Any time, he got a bad bounce or close call, any time the wind changed, he got excited.

Trouble on the Home Front

Clerc experimented with yoga last year in Paris. The stretching and coocentration exercises made him more conscious of the mental side of the game, which he describes as "being strong in the head." He finally cracked the top 10, but at bome be was still No. 2 to Vilas.

"People in Argentina would say to me, 'When are you going to beat Vilas?" be said. "I say, 'It doesn't matter if 1 beat Vilas. It is more important to have a high ATP computer ranking." "Now I have beaten Vilas and am No. 1 in Argentina. I have confidence and I am feeling happy." Clerc and Vilas are farther apart in personalities than Borg and McEnroe, and these differences have created some tense times. Clerc did not play in the National Cup last spring (reportedly because of Vilas' excessive demands for a larger percentage of the player split).

The two seldom speak, and there are complications over the choice of a Davis Cup captain that could keep one or the other from playing in the interzone semifinal against Britain in October.

"We're completely different," Clerc says. "I am very happy and like to talk to the people. He's very quiet and likes to stay in his room and write."

Only Lapses: Technical

If Clerc has any weaknesses on the court, they are technical subtleties. The toss of his serve is still too far to the left, thus leaving him less flexible and delaying his ability to reach a comfortable volleying position. A Western grip on the forehand gives him fewer options on low, short balls near the net.

But Clere has learned how to win. Down two sets to one against Connors in the quarterfinals of the French Open, he took the last two sets, 7-5, 6-0. Then, against Lendl in the semifs, he had a match point in the fourth set before losing, 6-2, in the fifth.

"I think he's prepared to win a major championship," Rodriguez said. "That's our goal now. He's won some big tournament events, he's made the masters. Now we are pointing for a major title like Wimbledon or the U.S. Open."

Faugued from the past month, Clerc will ease into the open, which starts Sept. 1. He will rest in Buenos Aires with his wife, Annelie, who is expecting a child later this month. Clerc will play several local exhibitions and then return to the United States for a tune-up event the week before the open. "I don't know if I can win," he said, "but I'm serving very well, moving more quickly. "And I'm more confident."

Then, as they say, the wheels came off.

Otto, you may be surprised to learn, doesn't look at it quite that way. He can't get around without Otto first blew out his knee in the pros in 1971, a little before the season began. "I don't know if that was typical of pro football," he said. "But it was typical of me. I had seven knee surgeries in the pros and although I dreaded each one, the real pain was in playing on them.

But I loved the game too much not to play, loved it too much not to All this time Otto was leading the Raiders to a lot of victories and championships and getting himself picked on 12 all-star or allpro teams. He was the consummate center through all it all, providing the Raiders with more than just consistency.

The Associated Press CLEVELAND — Cleveland In-dian outfielder and designated hitter Joe Charboneau, the Ameri-can League Rookie of the Year in 1980, has been optioned to the team's Triple-A affiliate Charles-ton Charlies, team officials said Tuesday.

Charboneau had been struggling at the plate this season, hitting .206 with four home runs and 16 runs batted in. He appeared at the plate 39 times in the first half of the season.

Batting 289 with 23 home runs and 87 runs batted in 1980, "Super Joe" played in 131 games and was of the most popular ballplayers to hit Cleveland in decades. "I'm just going to go down and do my best — and hopefully make it to the big leagues again," he said. "There's no promises about coming back "

Fruit Fly Sterility And Profit Fertility

WASHINGTON --- You can't go off for a few days on vacation without someone fouling up. Take the Mediterranean fruit fly. I specifically left orders that only STERILE flies were to be released in fruit-bearing areas of 00 115. California.

It was a very simple operation and a child could have done it. I have a copy of

"Is this the Mediterranean

"Si " "I need 14 million sterile fruit flies to release over the San Jose area this month. Do you have them?"

"Now I want to make sure these are the yellow iridescent kind with a wing span of less than a halfinch, and I want only males. You got that?" "SE

What I plan to do is release the males at mating time, have them search out the females and fire blanks. This way we'll wipe out the fruit fly without using harmful insecticides. You get what I'm driving at?"

"How. do I know that all the flies will be sterile?"

"My brother. Carlos inspects each one before it leaves the factory.'

"Does Carlos know anything about quality control?"

"Si, we have never ever sold a male insite find fly that could help a female lay a fertile egg. If Carlos even suspects a male is not sterile he'll smash it with a fly swatter and ask questions later."

Toy Soldier Sold for $468 The Associated Press

LONDON - A world auction record of £260 (about $468) was paid at Phillips auction house in London Wednesday for a toy sol-dier. The three-inch lead figure of a British Camel Corps soldier was made in 1910 when it sold for two pennies. It went to a private buyer.

"I have only Carlos' word for rhie? "With each sterile fly we give you a warranty. If the fly turns out not to be sterile we give you your money back, and you get a free fly

• * •

"That's fair," I admitted. "But it's hard to believe that your brother Carlos would be able to personally inspect I4 million fruit flies." "He doesn't do it alone. My cousin Luis helps him." "That explains it," I said. "Just out of curiosity, how do you steri-lize a fruit fly?"

"You have to be very careful."

"I know that. But it seems to me, when you're dealing in these numbers, there could easily be a slip up and a non-sterile male could sneak through. How do you prevent that?"

"My cousin Eduardo stands at the door with a can of 'Raid.' You seem to run a very safe operation. When can I have delivery on the fruit flies?"

"I'll ask my brother Carlos." The man came back in a minute. Will Tuesday do?"

"That seems reasonable. I'm oing off on vacation, and I would like all the sterile fruit flies to do their work while I'm gone." Si. Obviously something went wrong, because when I returned I got the word that the Med fly had infested the entire fruit-growing heart of California. I immediately called the Mediterranean Fruit Fly Company.

"All right," I said angrily. "What happened?" "I do not know, señor. My brother Carlos told me when the 14 million flics left here for California they were all sterile." "A likely story. What do I do now?

"I'll let you speak to my Cousin Tomas," What for?"

"He's in charge of our company's helicopter spraying division." "You have a spraying division?" "Of course. You don't think we can make any money sterilizing fruit flies."

An appeals court in California has reversed a $104,000 award for rehabilitation given Michelle Triola Marvin in her palimony suit against Lee Marvin, but her lawyer said the fight is not over. The state Court of Appeal ruled 2-1 that the award for rehabilitation was not proper under California law, although the court did not overrule the principle under which she sued the actor in 1972 for $1.8 million, or half the assets he carned during the six years they lived together. Marvin Mitchelson, lawyer for the onetime nightclub singer, said he would appeal the case to the California Supreme Court. Lee Marvin's lawyer, Dave Kagon, said the actor "was pleased" because the Court of Appeal ruling "is basical-ly the position we'd taken." "We didn't feel, under the circumstances, that the $104,000 was jus-tified," Kagon said. But Mitchelson said that in the original 1976 state Supreme Court ruling allowing palimony suits, there is a provi-sion specifying that "lower courts are free to evolve whatever remedare nee to evolve whatever remed-ies they deem appropriate, based on the reasonable expectation of the parties." He said the Court of Appeal disregarded that provision in finding fault with Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall's award of "rehabilitative" remedy.

Using helicopters and a Rolls-Royce, London's top hotels battled it out Wednesday to get the first grouse on their tables on the "Glo-rious Twelfth" of August, the start of the grouse-shooting season. London's Hilton International claimed first place when assistant manager Eberhard Grammer re-turned with a brace shot at dawn on Lord Bolton's North Yorkshire estate, 220 miles north of London. Graupner rose before dawn, traveled on a private flight to the estate, Leyburn, and returned with the birds at 9:29 a.m. They were brought from Elstree airport, north of London, to London's Battersea district by helicopter and driven the last six miles by Rolls-Royce to the kitchens of the Hilton in Park Lane.

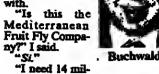

A member of the District of Columbia Board of Education, Calvia Lockridge, has filed suit against The Washington Post seeking $8.8 million in damages because of the newspaper's article about a nonexistent 8-year-old heroin addict. Lockridge said he had "an obligation to the citizenry to seek restoration from The Post for the per-

She is the granddaughter of Adam Opel, founder of the auto company. * * * For just a minute, when Harold Norris saw the $9.9-million bal-ance printed in his savings pass-book, he had a vision. "Harold Norris - multimillionaire --- I like the sound of it," said Norris, 45. a" postal employee who says he has saved $4,500 in his lifetime, plus several albums of valuable stamps. Norris discovered the misprint after withdrawing $100 from the Chase Manhattan Bank branch near his New York apartment. He had gone home without looking at the book, but decided later that he needed more money for a pur-chase. So he checked the balance on his savings book and saw a much inflated bottom line -$9,904,524.35. Bank manager Lou-
